

Information update 27 April

by Miemie Neethling-Taylor - Monday, 27 April 2020, 5:14 PM

Dear UCC students,

I sincerely hope you've had a good weekend and that returning to your online lectures last week has helped a bit in providing structure and meaning in these bizarre times.

No detriment

As stated in my communication with you last week, I was hoping to update you on the No detriment policy today. Unfortunately, we are still awaiting final approval for how exactly this will be applied to you. At the moment, I can confirm that the no detriment policy will be a safety net for all students, including progressing and final year students. Please note that you still need to complete all your Semester 2 assignments this semester. More information will be released as soon as possible.

Academic support

No doubt many of you are feeling anxious about completing assignments during this pandemic. Please note that your lectures are available during the week to assist you with academic matters. Some lectures will take longer than others to respond. Please be patient as like you, your lecturers continues to adjust to working from home and providing care for their families whilst supporting you.

If you require additional help with academic matters, please note you can also request support from the HE Learning Support Practitioner, Maria Dyer (dyerm@croydon.ac.uk).

There is also a new page on the UCC hub called HE Academic Support which you may find useful <https://moodle.croydon.ac.uk/course/view.php?id=12781>

If you require support with mitigation, please contact the HE Coordinator, Kim Meyler-Vincent on ucc.registry@croydon.ac.uk

For the latest updates on the Coronavirus pandemic, please refer to <https://www.gov.uk/coronavirus>

Thank you for your continued commitment and perseverance.